Your wish will be added to the collective pool of hope.

In this room the image of your interaction with the Goddess of Hope may be recorded and stored for future printed or digital publication.

If you object to the public use of your image, you may choose to make the Sign of the Horns, just like Bertel Thorvaldsen discreetly does in this historical photograph dating 1840.

If you clearly make the horn-hand gesture in front of the camera, before leaving the room, we will refrain from publishing your picture.

This daguerreotype of Bertel Thorvaldsen was made in 1840 by Aymard Charles Théodore Neubourg. It is the first portrait photograph made in Denmark. By making the horn gesture Thorvaldsen means to fend off the evil spirits of modern technology while having his picture taken.

Functionality: for optimal face recognition, please stand behind the lamps.
Wearing glasses may interfere with the recognition.
